Frontier is Going a Deeper Shade of Green....

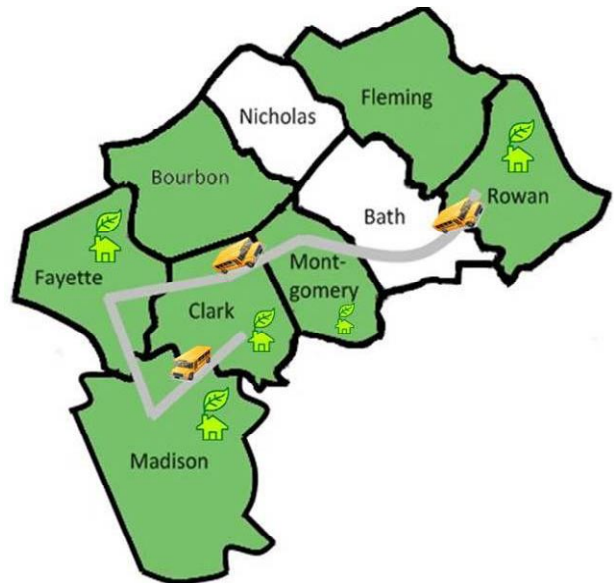

Morehead, KY – To celebrate Earth Day, Frontier Housing will break ground today at 4:00 p.m. at the Community of Edgewood on its first “Green Build Kentucky,” home design. This innovative design promotes energy efficiency and green building practices for residential design, development and construction. Frontier chose to name this exciting new product after Dr. Tom Carew, co-founder of Frontier Housing. The Carew Home will honor Dr. Carew’s dedication to serving the region.

In addition, more than a dozen modest-income homes in seven counties will receive extensive energy efficiency improvements, as part of Kentucky’s Clean Energy Corps, a program launched by Governor Beshear to reduce energy costs, protect the environment, and create thousands of “green collar” jobs.

The Clean Energy Hybrid Bus Tour will feature a Louisville TARC hybrid bus filled with volunteers and distinguished guests, such as the Governor and First Lady, at some stops. The tour will reach five counties on Earth Day.

Each tour site will host an Open House, where the public can witness home improvements and take home “Clean Energy Kits,” filled with energy-efficient devices and user-friendly tips on how to save energy in their own homes.

Please make plans to join Frontier, the nonprofit pioneer in building Energy Star qualified homes, as we celebrate yet another achievement in serving the families of eastern Kentucky.
